The Braindead Megaphone - Wikipedia

Megaphone Guy, it seemed, had gone a little braindead. Or part of him had. What had gone dead was the curious part that should have been helping us decide about the morality and intelligence of invasion, that should have known that the war being discussed was a real war, that might actually happen, to real, currently living people.

The Megaphone Man isn't just the collective voice of the media; it is the surrounding people and environment that also contribute to the spreading of ideas. George Saunders defines “...the Megaphone as the composite of the hundreds of voices we hear each day that come to us from people we don't know, via high-tech sources...”(244).

The Braindead Megaphone - The Burning Platform

In the essay, “The Braindead Megaphone” by George Saunders, the first point he makes is that a metaphor for the news media is a “storyteller” and it's purpose is to entertain the people. Other than the news acting as a storyteller, some other important arguments Saunders makes are the ones that talk about why the government turns to the media and vice versa.
